A close-up, vertical photograph of a large, weathered stone statue. The statue depicts a man with a full, light-colored beard and a cap. The stone is heavily textured with cracks and is covered in patches of yellowish-orange lichen. The lighting is bright, casting shadows that emphasize the rough surface and the features of the face. The statue appears to be part of a larger architectural structure, with a dark, possibly metal, element visible on the left side.

A close-up, vertical view of a weathered stone statue of a man, likely a religious figure, showing significant cracking and discoloration. The statue is wearing a long, draped garment and a circular collar. A dark, vertical object, possibly a cane or staff, is visible on the right side.
